Through self-displacement, successive actions and minimal materials, Intra Muros I proposes a sense of contemplation, as the artist gradually tries to accumulate meanings through a constant folding and unfolding of images. Pursuing a process based on persistence, Viale's work suggests multiple stages of working, rather than presenting a completed product.

Transformation through time and accumulation plays a major role in the elaboration of the work. The artist's body becomes a "doing body" engaged in creating, layering and collecting traces of actions, which progressively transform the space and the artist herself. Martine Viale (Montréal) creates installations over time using the process of performance. Her work has been presented across Canada, and in France, Belgium, Serbia, Scotland, Spain, Denmark and the US.
